About Alaska: While Alaska is the largest state in the US by area, it is the 3rd least populous state and the least densely populated. Alaska has relied heavily on petroleum revenues for the large portion of the state government's budget. With the revenues from the oil and gas industry, Alaskans created a sovereign wealth fund in 1976, the Alaska Permanent Fund. The Fund had a market value of $65.9 billion as of April 26, 2019 and is the source of an annual dividend paid to each Alaska resident. Mining, fishing, tourism, air cargo, and the military are also strong contributors to Alaska's economy.
